

Abstract

The present invention is directed to a method for an entity, a governmental or business entity, to procure a financial product from a financial institution. The method includes the steps of: posting an entity's request for a proposal (RFP) for the financial product to a website, the RFP having been authorized by an official of the entity; electronically notifying the financial institution that the RFP has been posted; reviewing the RFP by the financial institution; and electronically notifying the entity of a result of the review by the financial institution.
